Hon. Commissioner of Patents
and Trademarks
Washington, D.C. 20231

DECLARATION UNDER 37 C.F.R. §1.132

I, Mark Cannon, hereby state as follows:

1. I am the inventor of the invention disclosed and claimed in the above referenced U.S. patent application.
2. Since the introduction of the area array package or ball grid array (BGA) over 15 years ago, the single largest problem has been with the ability to control the process due to the fact that visual inspection after soldering was considered impossible. This standpoint has been documented by all international specifications including NASA, Military Specification 2000, and IPC. Additionally, in every publication written by world renown industry experts, visual inspection of the BGA after soldering is not possible but is needed based on the limitations of x-ray technology which is the state of the art. The high cost of x-ray inspection equipment has also been repeatedly noted in all international publications as a limiting and negative factor. The need for low cost, visual inspection for BGA components has been long felt and well documented. This is supported for example by the article by Phil Zarrow from the December 19, 1999 Circuits Assembly publication. Mr. Zarrow notes that the emergence of array packages has raised the question of how to inspect the inner connections. Mr. Zarrow notes that x-ray equipment as well as laminography equipment was initially used. Mr. Zarrow noted that x-ray equipment did not provide sufficient information with regard to defects like opens and voids.
3. Upon my invention being fully developed and sold, the reaction by the consuming public has been very good. The invention has met with extraordinary commercial success. As noted in Mr. Phil Zarrow's article, with the device of my invention, it is now possible to actually see under the array packages to visually examine the soldered joints and see many other critical things. The commercial success of the product has been substantial. This is evidenced by the attached list indicating various manufacturers that have bought or are using the device of the invention.

The success is also demonstrated by the numerous international innovation awards given to the invention and product according to the invention as detailed in the attached press release. To my knowledge, no single product has won all of these awards. This is an indication that there has been a long felt need and that the invention is indeed nonobvious. The device has only been on sale for a short time. The tremendous numbers of units placed and the various different companies that use the device of the invention highlights the acceptance of the product. The commercial success also highlights that the product has satisfied the long felt need with regard to solder joint inspection. The commercial success indicates the non-obvious aspect of the invention.

4. I hereby declare that all statements made herein of my own knowledge are true and that all statements made on information and belief are believed to be true; and further that these statements were made with the knowledge that willful false statements and the like so made are punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, under Section 1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code and that such willful false statements may jeopardize the validity of the application or any patent issued thereon.
